If "Yes," has the person entered into a court-approved agreement for payment of all support owed and is the person in compliance with that agreement?

☐ Yes ☐ No

B. FURTHER CERTIFICATIONS

1. [This paragraph 1 applies only if the Matter is a contract being handled by the City's Department of Procurement Services.] In the 5-year period preceding the date of this EDS, neither the Disclosing Party nor any Affiliated Entity [see definition in (5) below] has engaged, in connection with the performance of any public contract, the services of an integrity monitor, independent private sector inspector general, or integrity compliance consultant (i.e., an individual or entity with legal, auditing, investigative, or other similar skills, designated by a public agency to help the agency monitor the activity of specified agency vendors as well as help the vendors reform their business practices so they can be considered for agency contracts in the future, or continue with a contract in progress).

2. The Disclosing Party and its Affiliated Entities are not delinquent in the payment of any fine, fee, tax or other source of indebtedness owed to the City of Chicago, including, but not limited to, water and sewer charges, license fees, parking tickets, property taxes and sales taxes, nor is the Disclosing Party delinquent in the payment of any tax administered by the Illinois Department of Revenue.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion, and the number of people aged 65 and over is expected to increase from 250 million to 450 million.

As a result of these demographic changes, the number of people in the world who are in the working age group (15-64 years) is expected to increase from 2.5 billion to 3.5 billion. This increase in the working age population will have a significant impact on the global labor market, particularly in developing countries where the working age population is growing rapidly.

One of the main challenges facing the global labor market is the need to create enough jobs to absorb the growing working age population. This is particularly true in developing countries where the economy is often based on agriculture and manufacturing, which are sectors that are not growing as fast as the working age population. In addition, the global labor market is also facing the challenge of a changing skill set, as the demand for high-skilled workers is increasing.

One way to address these challenges is through education and training. By providing education and training to the working age population, we can help them acquire the skills and knowledge needed to enter the labor market. This is particularly important in developing countries where the education system is often underfunded and the quality of education is low.

Another way to address these challenges is through labor market reforms. By improving the labor market, we can make it more attractive to workers and help them find better jobs. This can be done through a variety of measures, including improving labor laws, strengthening labor unions, and promoting labor market flexibility.

In addition, the global labor market is also facing the challenge of a changing labor force composition. As the world's population ages, the number of people in the working age group is expected to decline in some countries, while it is expected to increase in others. This change in labor force composition will have a significant impact on the global labor market, particularly in developed countries where the working age population is declining.

One way to address these challenges is through immigration. By attracting immigrants to the working age population, we can help to replace the declining number of people in the working age group. This is particularly important in developed countries where the working age population is declining rapidly.

In conclusion, the global labor market is facing a number of challenges, including a growing working age population, a changing skill set, and a changing labor force composition. By addressing these challenges through education and training, labor market reforms, and immigration, we can help to create a more vibrant and sustainable global labor market.
